SPENCER WEEPS

It Seems Impossible for "Dr. Endeavor to Have the Sherman Jekyll' to Keep Still in Court.

COVERS EYES WITH HIS HANDS WILL CARRY THE CASE HIGHER

First Indication of Attempt to Advance Insanity as a Defense Made Late in the Day.

i Springfield, Mass., Nov. 14 - Bertram G. Spencer, the man who, according to the we years by daring robbeties, appeared ompletely conserved at toolay's seaston of his trial on the charge of murdering Miss Mariba B. Blackstone. While District Attorney C. T. Callahan was describing the shooting of the school teacher on the night of March at, 1910, at the home of Mrs. Sarah J. Dow, the accused man broke down and wept, and exclaim ed "No! Oh, my God. No" "No, 1 never said that." It seemed impossible for Spencer to keep still. His legs tremited continuously and he covered his eyes with his hands

What was apparently the first effort the part of the defense to show that Spencer was insane at the time of the tragedy, was made late to-day, when Sarah J. Dow was cross-examined Attorney Stapleton, chief counsel for he accused man. Mr. Stapleton inquired particularly if the eyes of the man who entered her residence looked wild.

You might call it so, I suppose, the witness replied. Later Miss Lucy Dow, a daughter of Mrs. Dow, was asked whether the robber had not verlooked articles of value taking operty of less consequence. Miss Dow replied in the affirmative.

WOMEN TELL SAME STORY

The stories of the tragedy told by Mrs. Dow and her daughters, Miss Dow and Miss Harriet Dow, were practically the same. None of the women could identify the accuse man as the person who entered their ome and killed Miss Blackstone, sayng that the lower part of the murderer's face was covered by a handkerhief. They did, however, identify a to have been found in the possession of Spencer at the time of his arrest. as their property.
